ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Why Geography Optional

Importance of an optional can not be over stated in UPSC civil services examination. While interest in the subject should be the primary criterion for selection of an optional, past trends and convergence of syllabus with the general studies paper along with availability of guide/mentor should also be kept in mind while choosing an optional subject.

Geography has been one of most popular optional subjects among students and this can be seen in good number of students being selected every year from this subject.

Over the years, geography has proved itself as a mark fetching optional. An important reason for students taking up geography optional is that it overlaps with a substantial portion of general studies syllabus. Geography optional gives an edge to students in GS paper I - geography section, GS II- conceptual understanding of international relations, and GS paper III - industries, agriculture, and environment section besides helping in essay paper. Scientific and objective nature of the subject (physical geography) makes it popular among students who have aptitude for science. While, humanistic aspects (human geography) also make it suitable for students from humanities background.
